

Hmong Field Day

Through the Environmental Quality Incentives Program, an irrigation system was installed for vermiculture (earth worms) at the Hmong farm in Massachusetts. The day included a hands on training session to learn how to establish soil and how to use the irrigation system. Following the training, visitors enjoyed a delicious meal of open pit roasted pig and a special drink made with rice.

A young farmer demonstrates the art of hoeing.